

TEACHER NOTES:

Firstly, a big THANK YOU for purchasing this product. Please check out my store for more products and follow me for updates.

This is a fun whole class game which allows your students to practice their place values in the hundreds of thousands.

Simply print these cards out and laminate them (optional) so they can be used multiple times.

Jumble up the cards and give to your students – 10 cards for each of the cards are given out (some students might get two cards).

Select a student to start – they read aloud the “I have, who has” on their card – all other students are listening and the student with the next number then reads aloud their “I have, who has”. Carry on until you are back to the first card.

I use this game as a math warm-up. Students love a bit of competition also – so I reward the class time – and then challenge them to improve upon the cards when we next play the game.

(Hint: Depending on your class level you could have your students in pairs, so they can check each others card if there is no one answering for the next number).

Also included are some template cards which can be used to make extra cards if needed. Just remove the last card (so it doesn't loop back to the start) and then add in the extra cards – make sure to link back to the start at the end.
